PART B: Truths

Q3: What does it feel like to be an Aboriginal person living in Victoria?

makes me proud of my culture & Strong to tell people who I am and what I do and how much love I have for my culture

Q4: What are the most important things you want people to know about your experiences?

- That there is always going to be challenges it's about how you come out stronger.
- Connecting to culture make you stronger & sometime can heal your spirit

Q5: What does self-determination look like to you?

Q6: What changes do you want to see for your children and grandchildren?

- for them to have to not have to protest for anything
- better schooling and for more indigenous culture brought into the school and ~~and~~ for the schools to do more then tick a little box & actual do something.

PART C: Protecting your information

Indigenous Data Sovereignty asserts the right of Indigenous Peoples to own, control, access and possess data that derive from them.

The Yoorrook Justice Commission applies Indigenous Data Sovereignty protocols to the collection, storage, and use of First People's information. These protocols respect the decisions you make on how your information is used, protected, accessed, and shared now and in the future.

Yoorrook uses submissions to inform our inquiries. We will not use your submission for any other purpose without contacting you for permission.

This section is about your choice on whether you want your submission published or not, and whether to include your name, or not. If a submission is published it is a public document that can be read by anyone and Yoorrook may refer to or quote from published submissions in our reports.

Please choose one of the following options: * (required)

- I agree to Yoorrook publishing my submission including my name (or my group's name if it is a group submission)
- I agree to Yoorrook publishing my submission anonymously without my name (or my group's name if it is a group submission)
- Do not publish my submission (Yoorrook will still read your submission and it will inform our work, but Yoorrook will not publish it on our website or refer to it or quote from it in our reports. Your submission will be kept confidential.)

Please note that Yoorrook will not publish all or part of a submission if it considers it inappropriate to do so.
